The annual Marin Show: Art of the Americas celebrates its 25th year this coming February, as the most substantive and extensive ongoing showcase focused on the indigenous arts from across North, Central and South America. The show, produced by KR Martindale Show Management, is described as the "Superbowl of Native American Art collecting," bringing together top and passionate dealers, collectors, artists, and academia from across the world. Kim Martindale, a collector for 40 years as well as an exhibitor, notes that the show has seen market prices of much of this art vault to the highest stratosphere during his 25 years producing the show. The exhibited art includes pottery, textiles, sculpture, jewelry, beadwork, baskets, paintings, photography and more, ranging in price from $25 - $1,000,025 so as to offer quality material to buyers ranging from first time buyers to seasoned collectors. The show is vetted by the Antique Tribal Art Dealers Association (ATADA), and is broken down into two areas: the main floor focusing on antique material, and the adjacent hotel ballroom, which showcases more contemporary art and artists.

To highlight the Marin Show's 25th anniversary, there will be a gala benefit on Friday, February 20th, from 7:00 – 10:00pm. More information at www.marinshow.com.

In addition to the exhibit floor, there will be two public lectures, and one directed more to those highly vested in the business of collecting, owning or selling specifically Native American art.
